HUSINESS PROSPECTS.

The country, having passed through a severe struggle for self-preservation now naturally desires rest. The channels of business have been obstructed, or, at least, turned from their usual course from the very beginning of the connict, and it is exceedingly desirable that they should fully resume their normal condition. From the close of the war they have been approximating this much more mpidly than could have been expected, until the business relations of the country were becoming quite satisfactory. It is evident that if left to take their own course, free Iron extraneous excitement or control, there is little or no danger of collapse or general bankruptey, though the process of transition brings with it peculiar perils. The conviction that the government is safe beyond contingency is all that is needed to secure general prosperity. Capital is proverbially timid, and buslness is easily affected by anything that threatens the stability of government. In this light, if in no other, the present troubles at Washington are exceedingly unfortunate. Whatever may be thought of the plan of reconstruction adopted by Congress, it has, at least, the merit of providing for the restoration of the secuded States to their forfeited places in the Union. It is the only plan before the country, and opposition to it, now that it has been adopted as the settled policy of the nation, is merely factious, and must, in the end, be altogether unavailing. But such opposition, when coming from the President has an influence for cyll on the business relations of the country that can searcely be calculated. Fears begin to revive, rumors of anticipated appeals to arms are put in circulation, political partizanship is intensified and embittered and genera disquiet awakened. As a result, gold goes up, stocks take a downward tendency, pri ces of the necessaries of life advance, and the whole country is made to feel the pressure. The speculators and stock gamblers come in and pash matters forward, and a panic states us in the face. Such is the condition of things to day. Nothing but the conviction of Mr. Johnson's inability to earry out his purposes prevents an upheaval | by the appointment of Gen. J. B. Stedman. in financial circles such as has not been witnessed for years. Uncertainty and distrust begin to provail among business men, greatly to the injury of the material interests of the nation, and the end is not yet.

But, though seeing the dangers that are before us, we believe we shall escape the greater calamities with which the country is threatened. The tone of the loyal masses is so decided and so meatly ananimous that it is impossible for any person or any clique to withstand the determination to preserve the government after the manner indicated by the legislation of Congress.-Business may be disturbed for awhile, and heavy burdens be thrown upon the people, but in the end the efforts to relaid and obstruct will come to enught. For the present every man in the country will feel the effects of the movement, but it will not be long before the factions opposition of the few will be so fully overcome that there will be no room for timidity and distrust. Bo long as the people have faith in the future of our country all will be well. As that faith is weakened by political dissensions such as arise from the present posture of our chief executive, business will become sisgnant, and the expenses of living, burdensome. Let us have a quiet acquiescence in the laws adopted, and obedience thereto in both high and low places, and we need have no doubt as to the financial interests of the country.

Washington, The N. Y. Times special of yesterday says :- The feeling in Washington has arttled down into almost the would state of the day quietude. There have been no developments to-day of any character, and the fever heat of the past few days has greatly abuted. The chief topic of discussion in cere of the fact, fully alluded : last night, that Congress has not given G we Grant the accessary powers to effectually checkmate the efforts of the President. -The latter's position is that, under the Reconstruction Act, he has the right to remove district commanders, which is admitted; that, despite the terms of the Reconstruction Act, he has the power inherent in him, under the Constitution, to execute those acts: that Gen. Grant has no original power under them, and that his powers are simply supervisory, and limited to certain welldefined action. As pertinent to this, when Gen. Grant issued paragraph b of his instructions to Gen. Thomas, the President told him he had no authority under the Reconstruction Acts to originate such instructions. Gen. Grant replied that if it was not conferred upon him by the Reconstruction Acis it certainly was by army regulations and well-established customs; for whenever an officer is relieved of a command, the officer who succeeds him is always directed to continue the orders he finds in force until modified or annulled by proper authority. Gen. Grant holds that the President's authority under the acts of Congress is expressly limited by the acts themselves; that beyond this the President has no original authority; that the district commanders are jurested by the laws with the sole re sponsibility of their execution, subject to his, Gen. Grant's, approval and disapproval In certain particulars. This is the interprelation of the acts given by Congress itself. The danger of a collision between the President and Gen. Grant depends entirely upon bow far the former will date to proceed .-If he confines binnelf to the removal of district commanders and a general direction that they execute the laws of Congress according to their provisions, as in Gen. Hancock's case, a rollision may be avoided, for Gen. Grant's power of revision of the acts of the district commanders, though seriously and inconsistently limited by the terms of the law, is yet sufficient to prevent much mischief if any of them are so disposed .-- views which he is known to hold, viz. that under the Constitution he has revision ary power himself, there will certainly be a conflict. Time slone can determine.

A prize fight occurred at the Pallsades yesterday morning, between Barney O'Brien and Patsey McLaughlie. After 43 rounds fought, O'Brien was knocked senseless, and failed to come to time. The telegraph say s his injuries will prove fatal. It is a pity both were not put out of the way.

A BLACK MAN FOR CONGRESS.- Ellick Mahaly, of Crawford county, Ga., a black man, offers himself to the voters of the Fourth Congressional District of that State as a candidate for Congress. Mr. Mahaly tells who be is, and what are his sentiments. He says, "I was born a slave on the plantation of Benjamin Lockett, Watren county, Mississippi. I remained with my old master until 1864, when I was brought to Georgia and sold to Mr. Isaac Dennis. My old master mised me us well as slaves one usually raised, giving me the radiments of a common English education and instilling into my youthful mind the principles of honesty and virtue, And I will say here that I have never departed from them."

He promises, if elected, to do all be can to reconcile the sections, a 4 that while his greatest efforts will be directed to the interest of his own race, he will lo his beat to ameliorate the condition of the whites. He also favors a repeal of the cotton tax and universal amnesty.

The Washington Evening Accords recent date contains the following: "An impression is prevaling everywhere in Maryland that the President is preparing to declare martial law throughout the United States, and prevent the assembling of Congress in November next by ince of arms. It has its origin in the allelged views of Hon, Jeremiah Black, who is redited here with having urged upon Mr. Johnson the ropriety of resisting impeachm at, if initia ted by the House, by declaring it a revolutionary measure, and protecting himself against it by the use of the army to that end. We see no reast, to doubt the truth of the advice of that in instastic and extreme gentleman, Mr. Bisck. b
